SNEAK THIEVES GET BUSY AGAIN

H. M. Bristoe's Home Robbed of Money and Other Valuables.

Sneak thieves have gotten busy in Hickman again after a short suspension of operations. This time they selected the home of H. M. Bristoe, occupying a flat over S. M. Naffol's building.

The robbery took place Friday evening while the family was away from home for a short time after supper. About dusk they had gone to the Binsy Bee Cafe for supper, and it was during this absence that the thief or thieves applied their nefarious trade. There are no clues to the identity of the thief nor is it known whether the robbery was committed by one or more.

The list of valuables taken includes $11.45 in money, two watch chains, a bracelet, a pair of gold cuff buttons, a neck chain, a la valliere and a ring. A considerable larger quantity of money was in another compartment of the purse from which the $11.45 was taken, but the thief overlooked the larger amount. Entrance to the house was gained through the back door, which had been left unlocked.

31 BALES OF COTTON SOL FOR 20 1/2 CENTS

Goalder Johnson last week sold 31 bales of cotton to a representative of the Newberger Cotton Co., of Memphis, for 20 1/2 cents. This cotton was the tail end of the 1920 crop, picked about Christmas, 1920, and held and stored in the Barkett Wholesale Grocery Co.'s warehouse, and was grown on the W. C. Johnson Estate land on Humby Pond. At the time it was picked, the prices offered for it were: 19 bales, 5.05 cents; 2 bales, 7 cents; 7 bales, 11 cents; 2 bales, 8 cents. During the summer of 1921 the prices quoted for it were: 10 bales, 21 cents; 4 bales, 15 cents; 14 bales, 12 cents; 3 bales, 9 cents. Mr. Johnson had several cotton firms of Memphis send buyers here to see the cotton and secured the excellent price of 20 1/2 cents from Mr. Newberger's representative for the entire 31 bales which weighed 18,000. This is a most excellent indication of a highly good price for cotton this fall, and also demonstrates what a better price can be secured by having buyers come here to buy the cotton, for the price given Mr. Johnson was 10 c. b. Hickman, and this method eliminates the payments of freight, storage, insurance and commission fees, which eat up a large percent of the profit.

REALLY, NOW, THIS SHOULD BE LOOKED INTO

During the past week or more, Messrs. R. M. Isler, R. Y. McConnell, W. T. Bondurant and W. J. McMurry have been viewing all the lands protected by the levee below Hickman. While discharging their duties a few days ago in the vicinity of the Big Slough some of the aforementioned gentlemen discovered a snake. There is nothing very unusual about seeing snakes in that part of the world, but this one as described by Messrs. Isler and McConnell is worthy of more than passing notice. The reptile was discovered crawling over a log in the slough. Nothing was visible except that part which was passing over the log, that was just above the water, both ends being under the water. The story was told to Mayor T. T. Swayne and J. W. Roney. Six shots were fired into the body of the snake while it was passing over the log. It was not explained from whence came the pistol nor who fired the shots, but a subsequent examination proved that there were six holes in the body ranging from three to six feet apart, the gentlemen not being unanimous on the length of the snake, but a difference of eight or fifteen feet is immaterial in stories of this kind. Mr. McConnell and Mr. Isler agree that this was a water moccasin. It was seen in Moccasin Bend. They are not wholly in unison as to the number of feet and legs it possessed, but agreed that it carried immense claws and had but two wings. In justice to Mr. Bondurant it should be explained that he did not see this wonder. Mr. McMurry refused to testify on the legal ground that to do so might incriminate himself. Mr. Isler stated they were not traveling in a truck and could not bring their captive to town. Tom Bone drove them home in their own car and says there has been more fishing in that vicinity the past few days than ever known before.

BLAZE MONDAY NIGHT.

Fire completely destroyed the house and contents, belonging to Jude Winston, well known colored man, Monday night. Before the blaze was discovered and the alarm was turned in, the fire had gained considerable headway, and it was impossible to save either the house or any of the furniture. It is thought that the fire started from an oil lamp, but this is uncertain, as the family was away from home at the time and knew nothing of the fire until it was over. No insurance was carried on either the house or the furniture.

This is the second time Jude has lost his home by fire, the other occurring on the same lot some seventeen years ago.

Misses Emma and Helen Tyler left New York City on the 31st of last month for England and France. They will spend about a year touring these and other countries of Europe.

Milton C. Miller of Louisville was in town this week on business.

New England Male Quartet Here at Chautauqua

The New England Male Quartet, which appears here at the coming Redpath Chautauqua, has established a reputation throughout the entire country—a reputation earned through its first-rank vocal attainments and originality in entertaining.

An exceptionally harmonious blending of voices is the feature of the vocal ensemble. This splendid harmony is equally gratifying in the songs from the classics and in the rollicking music of popular airs. In addition to a wealth of vocal features, the program is rich in capital character impersonations and amusing monologs. This is essentially a high-grade singing organization. It can be depended upon to please any audience.

On Tuesday, afternoon from 3 to 5

Mrs. J. Mack Reid and Mrs. Delbert Choate, at the home of the latter, entertained at six tables of bridge and one of ruck. Punch was served during the games and later refreshments consisting of lemon cream and angel food cake and minis were served, each plate being decorated with flowers. The guest list included Mesdames Herman Bradley, K. A. Taley, W. H. Baltzer, E. B. Prather, Sr., E. B. Prather, Jr., F. M. Maddox, Joe Engel, Henry Sanger, W. B. Amberg, C. M. Reynolds, Nina Walker, W. F. Remmenberg, E. D. Johnson, C. T. Bondurant, Cecil Roper, Bobin Roney, B. G. Hale, Jr., H. T. Shade, M. M. Spradlin, E. Dolson, A. A. Faris, A. S. Rimbaun, and Misses Mary Hollan, Lola Choate, Mildred Thompson, Carrie Male Reid and Thelen Barnes. Miss Miss Lightfoot, of Somerville, Tenn., was an out-of-town guest.

Miss Frankye Reid is spending ten days in Hawesville and Louisville, visiting relatives and friends.

Mrs. A. H. Young and son, Hitchkiss, of Memphis, are visiting her sister, Mrs. J. Mack Reid.

PLAYS A WICKED HAND OF "CINCIN" AT AGE OF 95

Dr. J. Almus Gardner, oldest man in Weakley county, was in Dresden last week visiting among friends. Dr. Gardner, who was the first male white child born in Dresden, although 95 years old, still enjoys a game of cinch, and engaged in the same with a number of experts at the hotel on Thursday evening, holding his hand with them as in the days of yore.

Dr. Gardner is 95 years old and can get around mightily well for a man of that age. He walked around town, talking to his acquaintances and seems to enjoy his stay in Dresden to a great extent.—Dresden Enterprise.

The protracted meeting will begin at the West Hickman Methodist church on Sunday night, June 11. Everybody cordially invited.—W. A. Banks, Pastor.

Herbert Creason is spending a week in St. Louis, as the guest of his sister, Mrs. Cyrus Oliver.

Miss Gurnet Benthall left Monday for Memphis, where she will take a ten weeks' teachers course.

Opening Announcement of New Insurance Office

I take this means of informing my friends and former patrons that I am back in the insurance business, and have with me my son, Cowgill, operating under the firm name of HELM & SON.

We expect to give the business the careful and prompt attention it requires, and feel an interest at all times in the betterment of insurance conditions in this community, and render REAL INSURANCE SERVICE to our patrons.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Harriet Field, twenty-eight years old and beautiful, is the social secretary of the Harringtons. Mrs. Isabelle Carter, a "Crownland," Richard Carter's home, and governess of 11-year-old Nina Carter. Ward, twenty-four years old and handsome, is the Harringtons' secretary. Mrs. Carter's latest "affair" is with young Anthony, and the youth is taking it very seriously.

CHAPTER II.—Presiding over the tea-party this summer afternoon, Harriet is profoundly disturbed by the arrival of a visitor, Royal Blondin. Next day, at a tea party in the city, Blondin makes himself agreeable to Nina, and leaves a deep impression on the unsophisticated girl.

CHAPTER III.—Harriet's agitation over the appearance of Blondin at "Crownlands" is explained by the fact that he had been a disturbing element in her life ten years before, and she fears him. The man is an avowed adventurer, living on the gullibility of the rich. He frankly announces to Harriet his intention of marrying Nina, who, as the daughter of the wealthy Richard Carter, is a highly desirable "catch," and urges her to aid him. She is in a sense in his power, and after pleading with him to abandon his scheme agrees to follow a policy of neutrality.

CHAPTER IV.—Harriet visits her married sister, Linda Davenport, with whom she had had her home during her unfortunate acquaintance with Blondin, and tells her of his reappearance. The two women, realizing the unscrupulous nature of the man, view the future with apprehension.

CHAPTER V.—Knowing the tender feeling she has inspired in Ward Carter, Harriet is tempted to marry him for the position and wealth he can give her, though realizing she does not love him. Blondin has ingratiated himself with Madame Carter, Richard's mother, and she is wholeheartedly in favor of his marriage with Nina. Ward urges Harriet to marry him at once. She procrastitates.

CHAPTER VI.—Angered at his wife's too open flirtation with young Anthony, Richard Carter markedly shows his resentment. Isabelle, ardently returning her youthful lover's attachment, elopes with him on his yacht, and pursuit is useless. The news of it is sensational and fair, exaggerated, of course, by gossip, is kept as much as possible from being public property.

CHAPTER VII.—Ward Carter again urges Harriet to marry him, but she cannot bring herself to an alliance with him merely for the sake of self-advancement, and refuses. The fact of Mrs. Carter's elopement becomes public. Harriet's capable managing hand is more than ever needed at "Crownlands," and she settles the complications she foresees as inevitable she decides to remain.

CHAPTER VIII.—Blondin puts pressure on Harriet to forward his marriage with Nina, but she makes up her mind to defy him. Richard Carter questions her concerning her knowledge of Blondin's intentions, and she counsels active opposition to the match. The family, with Harriet, move to a summer establishment on Long Island.

CHAPTER IX.—In the new home Harriet, with Madame Carter and Nina, settle down for a vacation. In a frank talk with Nina Harriet endeavors to show her Blondin's unworthiness, but it has little effect on the infatuated girl. On Richard Carter's insistence, Harriet is installed as mistress of the household, but finding her position untenable, declares her intention of leaving. Richard makes an offer of marriage, as a way out of the situation, but Harriet, considering such a thing impossible while Mrs. Carter (though divorced) is still alive, refuses and leaves the house. To her old-fashioned ideas, the fact that Richard Carter has been granted a divorce from his erring wife does not free him from his marital ties, and marriage with him is impossible.

CHAPTER X.—At her sister's home Harriet helps to bring her small nephew safely through an attack of diphtheria. Linda cordially approves Harriet's stand on the question of marriage with a divorced man. David Davenport, Linda's brother-in-law, warmly presses his suit, and Harriet has almost made up her mind to accept him when Richard Carter appears with the announcement that Isabelle is dead and no obstacle to his marriage with Harriet remains. This girl yields, and the marriage is quietly solemnized. Harriet offers to tell Richard the circumstances of her entanglement with Blondin, but he refuses to listen.

CHAPTER XI.—The news of their mother's death, shocking to Ward and Nina, is softened by Harriet's comforting. The three take a trip to Bermuda, and on their return Richard Carter realizes that he is deeply in love with Harriet, though their marriage has simply been one of convenience.

CHAPTER XII.—Formal announcement of the wedding is made, and Madame Carter somewhat graciously welcomes her new daughter-in-law. Harriet's close friends, however, many of them prominent in society circles, indignantly accord her a place, and extend sincere congratulations to Richard.

CHAPTER XIII.—Counseled by Harriet, Richard Carter urges Nina to abandon the idea of marriage with Blondin, but the girl is obstinate. Summoning Blondin, Carter makes his opposition plain. Blondin appeals to Harriet for support, and on her refusal makes the assertion that he and Harriet had been married ten years ago. Harriet practically admits the truth of the statement. And she went to Nina's room, wrote a vague idea that she would sit beside the weeping girl for awhile, one heavy heart close to the other, even if no words could pass between them.

But Nina lay sleeping peacefully, and Harriet, after watching her for a few minutes, went back to her own room. She went to the open window, and stood staring absently out at the dark summer night, the great branches of the trees moving in the restless wind, and the oblong of dull light that still fell from the library window. She could not see the horror as Richard saw it; she could not see herself as only a mistaken woman, a woman with youth, beauty, and intelligence pleading for her, one problem more in his life, it is true, but only one among many, and not the greatest. She did not see him as he saw himself, his family as the somewhat troublesome, and yet quite understandable.

group of selfish human beings in whose perplexities he had always played the part of arbiter.

To Harriet the thing loomed momentous, unforgiving, incalculable. It assumed to her the proportions of a murder. Richard, in her estimation, was not what he thought himself, a somewhat ordinary man in the forties whose life had already held poverty and disillusionment and wholesome disappointment, whose nature had been tempered to humor and generosity and philosophy; to Harriet, he was the richest, the finest, the most deserving of men, and she the adventuress who had brought his name down to shame and dishonor.

Until two o'clock she was wretchedly busy in soul and body. When the last of her personal possessions was packed, and when she was aching from head to foot, she took a hot bath, and crept into bed.

But not to sleep. The feverish agonies of shame and reproach held her. She was pleading with Richard, she was talking to Nina—she was making little of it—making much of it—she was saying a reluctant "yes—yes—yes!" to their questioning.

At four o'clock she dressed herself again, half-mind with headache and fatigue, and went out into a world that was just beginning to brighten into faint shapes and colors.

A steamer moved majestically up the river, the smoothly widening wake spread from shore to shore; pink light showed at one cabin window; and into Harriet's somber thoughts came unbidden the picture of a yawning cook, stumbling about amid his soot-blackened pots and pans.

With the morning, the peace of a conquered spirit fell upon her. She had thought it all to an ending at last. It seemed to Harriet that never in her life had she thought so clearly, so truly, so bravely. Her duty to Richard, to his children, to Linda; she had faced them without fear and without deception, testing the humiliating truth to its bitter dregs, planning the few short interviews that must precede her leaving them all forever.

For Harriet emerged from the furnace the mistress of her own soul. She had been wrong; she had been weak; she had been contemptible, but not so wrong or weak or contemptible as they would think her. She would go on her way now, the braver for the lesson and the shame. And what they thought of her must never shake again her own knowledge of her own innocence.

Go on her way to what? She did not know. But she neither feared what the future might hold nor doubted it. She could make her own way from a new beginning. "But before I go," said Harriet, resolutely, "I must tell him that I'm sorry. And I must ask Nina to forgive me."

She turned, and buried her face in the thick, soft sleeve of her coat. But

"Where Have You Been?" said Richard, sharply, then, "You Look Ill!"

He did not cry long, and when Jensen, the boatman, came out on the dock at seven, the lady he knew to be his new mistress was sitting composedly enough on her bench, studying the now glittering and sparkling river with quiet eyes.

Harriet nodded to him, and rose somewhat stiffly, to go up to the house. She mounted the brick steps with a thoughtfully dropped head—no straight shafts of the sunlight were making it impossible to face the house, in any case—and so was within three feet of Richard Carter before she saw him.

He looked fresh, hard, even young, in his white flannels. They stood looking at each other for a moment without speaking.

"Where have you been?" said Richard, sharply, then, "You look ill!"

Tears, despite her desperate resolution, suddenly stung Harriet's eyes. And yet her heart leaped with hope.

"I wanted to see you, Mr. Carter," she faltered. "I couldn't sleep very well. I've been down at the shore. But later—any time will do!"

"You couldn't sleep?" he exclaimed with quick sympathy. He looked from her about him, as if for a shelter for her emotion. "Here," he said, "come down the steps a bit. I was going down to the court for a little tennis; Ward may follow me, but he won't be dressed for half an hour yet. Sit down here; we can talk."

They had come to the marble bench on the terrace, where Isabelle and An-

The Symbolic Eagle.

The eagle stood for two things in ancient symbolism. The Greek name for the monarch of the air was a word meaning "rapid motion." The deeply mystic Hebrews, after watching the great bird sitting motionless, contemplating the sun, gave it a name which meant "meditation." In early Christian art the eagle became the symbol of spiritual power, because it was able to soar tirelessly through the highest places. The lion was the symbol of human pride and temporal power.

CONGRATULATIONS (Fulton Lender)

The Hickman Courier, one of the best weekly papers in the state, celebrates its sixty-second birthday this week. The Lender wishes to extend its best wishes to this good old paper and the boys who have it in charge. The present owners, Crain & Roney, have been in charge of the paper for only two years, but they have succeeded in keeping it up to its former high standard. The Courier was established in 1859 by Judge George Warren, who conducted it without interruption until his death in 1901. After this the paper had several owners, and somewhat of a varied career until it was purchased by John Sexton and Will Spier. These two took hold of the paper and developed into one of the best and most profitable newspaper properties in the state. They sold out two years ago to the present owners, who have continued to make a good paper, and one that is a credit to the town and to themselves. The Lender extends its felicitations to The Courier and wishes for it many happy returns of the day.

A HICKMAN INTERVIEW

Mrs. Moss Tells Her Experience

The following brief account of an interview with a Hickman woman four years ago, and its sequel, will be read with keen interest by every citizen: Mrs. Richard Moss, Washington St., gave the following statement: October 18, 1916: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills and was helped when my kidneys were out of order and my back ached and pained. The action of my kidneys was irregular, at times, and I had black spots before my eyes. I was mighty dizzy sometimes and I felt badly. I can't tell just how my back felt. Sometimes it pained me so I would have to hold out. As I had known of Doan's Kidney Pills for some time, I used a few boxes and was helped. I can say a good word for Doan's, because they are a mighty good kidney medicine." On December 3, 1920, Mrs. Moss said: "Doan's Kidney Pills are still my favorite for kidney complaint. They always straighten me up when my kidneys bother me. I am glad to tell any one to take Doan's if they have bad kidneys." Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Moss had. Foster-McMillan Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

"A notable event in Hickman society was the debut party given to Miss Laura Enigma by her friend, Miss Kate Handley."

THE RADIO-TELEPHONE

Since the invention and improvement of the vacuum tube, or audion, the wireless telephone, which was at first merely a scientific curiosity, has become an article of domestic furniture and a means of fresher entertainment quite as familiar as the piano or the phonograph. The rapid growth of public interest in "radio" throughout the country is astonishing; indeed, it can fairly be described as infectious. Without any particular advertising except at the hands of its loving friends, the small boys, the radio apparatus has found its way into myriads of homes. A few weeks ago it was said that more than 600,000 persons owned instruments that would receive and "amplify" wireless messages. By this time it is probable the number is nearer a million.

Although the air is continually agitated with wireless messages of one sort or another, the popularity of the radio-telephone is principally owing to the establishment of powerful transmitting stations here and there throughout the country, which send out programs that can be caught by any receiving instrument within range and reproduced by the amplifier for the amusement or edification of the family circle. Those programs contain every sort of thing. There are sermons for those who are prevented from going to church, bedtime stories for children, talks on every conceivable subject, from play writing to hygiene of the mouth.

and orchestra and vocal music. There is of course no charge; the cost of sending them into the air is borne by concerns that have radio supplies to sell. The new fad has given a new verb to the language; the sending stations are said to "broadcast" their entertainment.

At present the interest in radio-telephony is largely the interest of curiosity in a new and fascinating invention; but there are wonderful possibilities in it for broadening and stimulating life, particularly in the country. To the most isolated ranch or farmhouse the radio-telephone can bring the lecturer, the story teller, the famous singer, the band or orchestra; and later it will no doubt also bring crop, market and weather reports and items of general news. There are stations today that can broadcast several hundred miles. It seems reasonable to believe that, although radio enthusiasts are today more common in the cities, the country will in the end come to make the most constant and eager use of the new invention. The instruments even now are not expensive, and no doubt they will soon be much cheaper. At a very slight cost an ingenious boy can make a receiver that, if he lives within reasonable distance of a broadcasting station, will serve his purpose.

CRUTCHFIELD NOTES.

Miss Inez Lawrence of Graves County, is the visitor of Mrs. Lennie Bruce at this writing.

The burial services of Mrs. Cassie Madding, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ewing Roberts Sunday afternoon about two o'clock, of appendicitis, were held at Union Monday afternoon at three o'clock. She was 82 years of age and although she has been afflicted for many years her almost sudden death was a shock to her many friends and relatives. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Ewing Roberts and Mrs. Kate Robinson, and one son, Dick Shack, besides several grandchildren and many friends and relatives. May those who mourn for her be comforted by God's blessing. The burial services were conducted by Rev. Rudolf.

Miss Augusta Little, who has been attending the university at Jackson, returned to her home near here last week. Miss Sadie Smith spent Monday night with Misses Lillian and Vera Scott.

Quite a number attended the Child ren's Exercises here Sunday night.

Miss Ada Herring and niece, Miss Estelle, were visitors of Mrs. Mollie Moore this weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Williams and son, Fletcher, are visiting relatives in St. Louis.

Misses Ora and Lillian Scott were visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Hannibal Scott Tuesday night.

Catarhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Catarhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be removed and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for any case of Catarhal Deafness that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE.

A Card to the Public:

We wish to thank the patrons of the plant that have stood by us, regardless of price conditions, for ice. We feel that they realized that we were having to pay a high price for coal, ammonia and other supplies. It was not because we wanted to raise prices, but on account of conditions over which we had no control whatever, that caused it.

The volume of business and the fact that we are compelled to run at a loss during the winter months, to accommodate the patrons of the plant, that use ice in large quantities for their meat boxes, ice cream parlors, etc., is probably a point that is overlooked by a great many people not conversant with the facts in the matter.

On account of the hills, our delivery costs are higher than it is in other towns, repair bills for wagons and horseshoeing being almost twice as much as in other towns.

THE SONG OF REPUBLICAN PROSPERITY

I'm busted and disgusted, and I don't know what to do. My pocketbook is empty—haven't got a single son. I'm actually tired of living, but it costs too much to die, for the price of wooden overcoats is awful, and too high. For one long year I haven't worked a solitary day; if I ever get another job my debts, perhaps, I'll pay. I've always been a working man, for work my love's language, but I took my seat with Harding and I've kept it ever since.

I've been accused of everything, been talked about and cursed, been walked upon and flattened out, then trampled in the dust. They say I am dishonest, that I won't pay my bloody debts, (I pay 'em like they all pay me. I pay 'em with regrets.) Some guys not all that's comin'; I'd like to hear their plan. When a guy owes me a bloody debt I get it if I can. I'll wait for change to settle down, for the country's in a stew, as long as Harding keeps his seat. I guess I'll keep mine too. We're getting back to normal, that's the story going round, but I'm afraid I'll starve to death before it gets around. I'm always on the lookout for some way of getting by. I've been held up and sand ogged; they've squeezed me till I'm dry. Every guy I meet wants money; I'm commended and required, I've seen my savings melt away until, by gosh, I'm tired. I'm hoping something will break up to end this dried suspense, for I took my seat with Harding and I've kept it ever since.

I'm busted and disgusted, I am all in, down and out. My pocketbook is empty, so I guess I'll go without. I'm dreaming of the days when I had money in my jeans; when I sit down to the table now I die on jowl and greens. And visions of those good old days, they almost turn my head, I'm tired of this old C. O. P. sowbilly and corn bread. I think I'll join the whittlin' club that meets down at the store, for I took my seat with Harding, and I'm stuck for three years more.—Ex.

SNAKE AND HAWK STAGE DEATH BATTLE IN THE AIR

D. Boyd, a farmer living one mile north of Dresden, while at work in his field last Thursday, noticed a very large hawk flying near the ground and from the bird something appeared to be hanging.

The hawk lit upon the ground and Mr. Boyd decided to investigate, and found the hawk sitting quietly. When the large and wild natured bird, which appeared to be very much alive, refused to escape Mr. Boyd struck the hawk with a stick, at which time a snake shot his head from under the hawk's wing and struck at him.

With another blow he killed the snake, and on further examination it was found that the snake had coiled around the hawk.

It is the opinion of Mr. Boyd that the bird, while on the ground, was attacked by the reptile and in an effort to get away the hawk flew in the air with the snake, flying until exhausted. The snake measured six feet five and one-half inches.—Martin Press.

DETAILS OF THE REGISTRATION LAW

Provisions of New Law Are Applicable to the Entire State

On July 10 and 11 every qualified voter in the state of Kentucky, male or female, will be required to register, if they expect to vote in the regular election in November, next. There will be another day for the registration of such persons as were unable, for one reason or another, to perform this duty on the regular days set apart for that purpose. This registration will suffice for all time for those registering, and it will not be necessary to register again so long as the qualified voter remains in that precinct.

Registration of qualified voters applies to those of the city and county precincts. Without registration it will be impossible to take part in the election in November, of any primaries preceding or following. Three days are fixed for the registration this year, the third being set for sixty days just preceding the November election. In the years following this there will be one registration day, the second Monday in July of each year. This is for those who may have reached their majority or may have moved from one precinct to another, or into the state and become qualified voters.

It is estimated by the county officials that the average registration will cost the counties less than $800 the first year, and less than one-half that sum each succeeding year. It is believed by politicians that it will obviate much irregularity in voting and that dishonest elections will be a thing of the past. The law was passed at the last session of the Legislature.

Officers for the registration shall be appointed on June 20 by the election commissioners. These officers shall be the same as heretofore, a judge from each of two dominant parties, a sheriff from one and a clerk from the other. Qualified citizens must be named by the committees from each party on June 15, in writing, and certified to the election commissioner for the purpose of choosing the officers.

Little change is made in the law, except the permanency of the registration. Citizens who have lived in the state for one year, the county six months and the district sixty days are eligible to vote and, of course, for registration. A record of the vote of every citizen shall be kept by the polling officers, a place being set aside on the permanent registration book to indicate each time a voter exercises his franchise.

Other facts to be noted on the registration books, which become permanent records are: Date of registration; name and address of registrant; terms of residence in the state, county, and precinct; color, age and occupation; party affiliation; sex; apparent weight, apparent height and other means of identification, such as color of hair and eyes; the signature of the voter, attested by the clerk and sheriff of election.

Unlike the old law, the clerk of the registration is required to post for ten days prior to the registration written or printed notices, furnished him by the county court clerk, in at least six conspicuous places, in said precinct, stating the time and place of such registration, and with information contained in such notices as to the requirements of the law, that all persons eligible to vote must be duly registered.

Whenever a registered voter changes his or her place of residence from one election precinct to another in same county, or whenever the boundaries of the precinct are changed by law, it shall be lawful for such voter to apply in person to the county court clerk for a new registration, and it shall be the duty of the clerk, who is the custodian of the registration books, to register such person in such precinct as provided for, and it is made the duty of the clerk to cancel the right of the voter to vote in his former precinct by striking his name from the book from which he was originally registered.

It is made the duty of a voter in removing from one county within the state to another, to apply to the county clerk from which he is moving, to have his name cancelled on the registration books of that county and get from the clerk a certificate of that fact. This certificate shall be taken to the registration officers of the county to which he is removing on the next regular registration day, and this shall be authority for registering him in the county.

Change in party affiliation may be noted on the registration books by personal application of the voter to the county clerk not less than sixty days preceding a regular election or primary.

For violation of the law by disturbing or molesting any registration officers in the performance of their duties, punishment is fixed at a fine of from $10 to $100. The same punishment is fixed for any officer of registration willfully failing to perform the duty assigned under the law.

When the governing authority for any city or county of either of the political parties casting the highest and next highest number of votes at the preceding election shall desire it, it shall be the duty of the county board of election commissioners to purge the polls at that particular precinct, and these officials shall not be residents of that particular precinct desired to be purged. It is necessary to give the name and address of each voter whose right to vote is challenged. Proceedings will then be instituted to try out the right of the voter to vote in that precinct. If the two officers appointed to hear such challenges disagree on any of the challenged voters, it is then referred to the circuit court clerk, who submits the case to the circuit judge. The judge decides the right of the voter and refers it back to the county court clerk.

Copies of the registration books are to be made by the county court clerk and kept safely in his office. Should any of the books be destroyed by fire, or otherwise, it shall be the duty of the election commissioners to hold a special registration in the precinct for which the books may have been destroyed. The books may not be taken from the office, except at the regular or primary elections, or as evidence in courts. Copies may be made by citizens at any time without charge, or the clerk, upon application, may make copies and receive the usual compensation.

False registration by any person, or of the obtaining of another person to register wrongfully is punishable under the act by confinement in the county jail from one month to twelve months. Any one altering or mutilating the registration books, or who shall aid in making false or fraudulent entries on them will be punished upon conviction by confinement in the penitentiary from one to five years. He shall also forfeit any office he then holds and shall forever be disqualified from holding office in the state.

Persons attempting to break up the lawful holding of registrations or molest the officers in the proper discharge of their duties may be punished by fine of from $100 to $500 and imprisonment from six to twelve months in the county jail or both.

TO THE MEN

Backward, turn backward, Oh Time in thy flight.
Give us a lad who is young and yet old.
Who really is able to sit and converse
Without every word being slang or a curse.
Give us a lad who respects womankind,
Who has something besides cards and dice on his mind.
Whose greatest ambition is not just to flirt,
And refer to all women as a June or a "skit."
Give us a lad who can be a good fellow,
Without drinking "hoorah" down in somebody's cellar.
Yes, time please, turn backward and give us again
In place of these "would-be sports," give us some MEN.

YOU CAN'T TRUST CALOMEL AT ALL

It's Quicksilver, Salivates, Causes Rheumatism and Bone Decay.

The next dose of calomel you take may salivate you. It may shock your liver or start bone necrosis. Calomel is dangerous. It is mercury, quicksilver. It crumbles into our bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take it spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tonic which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.

On lonely little islands scattered over the seven seas Great Britain has placed stores of food and other necessities for shipwrecked crews who might be washed ashore. Altogether twenty-four islands have these stores of food. Three are established on the most remote corners of Ireland, while the others are all on the smallest of the numerous islands dotted about the South Pacific and Indian ocean.

At the present time the German people have no national anthem, according to an official announcement of the Berlin government.

Hail Insurance Rates Reduced on Tobacco

With the recent reductions of hail storm insurance rates on growing tobacco, in the face of the enormous losses to growers within the last four or five years, every grower can afford to protect himself to the limit and, with safety, go into the business of producing a crop that requires so much money, time and labor, as does tobacco, that should be insured against loss by hail storms.

Now that so many growers have gone into an organization for a more economical, business-like way of handling their crops, and the insurance companies have so lowered rates on hail insurance, there is no reason in the world for any grower to neglect the protection of his crop by ample insurance.

Better see your insurance agent right away and have him protect your crop, which is likely to be destroyed any day by a hail storm. Policies become effective noon, July 10th.

HARRIET AND THE PIPER

thingy Pope, sheltered by these same towering trees and low brick walls, had had their talk a year ago. Harriet, to her own consternation, felt that she was in danger of tears.

"I—I hardly know how to say it," she began. "But—but you know how ashamed I am!"

"I know—I know how you feel!" Richard said with a sort of brief sympathy. "I'm sorry! But you know you mustn't take this all too hard. I didn't—I was thinking of this last night; I didn't ask you for—well, any more than you gave me, in this marriage of ours. Your divorce was your own affair!"

The girl's tired eyes flashed. "There was no divorce!" she said, quickly.

"No divorce?" he echoed with a puzzled frown.

"I want to tell you about it!" she said. But the tears would come again. "I'm tired!" Harriet said, childishly, trying to smile. "I've been up—walking. I couldn't sleep!"

The consciousness that he had been able to forget the whole tangle, and sleep soundly, gave Richard's voice a little compassion as he said:

"You don't have to tell me now. We'll find a way out of it that is easy for every one!"

"No, but let me talk!" Harriet, in her eagerness, laid her fingers on his wrist, and he was shocked to feel that they were icy cold. "I want to tell you the whole thing—I want you to understand!" she said, eagerly. Richard looked at her in some anxiety; there was no acting here. The rich hair was pushed carelessly from the forehead, and she was huddled in the enveloping coat, a different figure, indeed from his memory of the superb and angry girl of last night in the library lamplight.

"Mr. Carter, I never knew my mother—" she began. But he interrupted her.

"My dear," he said, in a tone he might have used to Nina. He laid his warm, fine hand on hers, and patted it soothingly. "My dear girl, if you feel that you would like to go to that motherly sister of yours—if you feel that it would be wiser—"

"Oh, I am going to Linda at once!" Harriet said, feverishly, hurt to the soul. "I had planned that! But—but won't you let me tell you?" she pleaded. She had framed the sentences a hundred times in the long night; they faltered utterly now, and she groped for words. "I was only three years old when my mother died," she said. "Of course I don't remember her—I only remember Linda. I was shy, my father was a professor, we were too poor to have very much social life. I lived in books, lived in my father's shabby little study really; I never had an intimate girl friend! Linda was always good—angelically good—talking of the Armenian sufferers, and of the outrages in the Congo, and of the poor in New York's lower East side—she never cared that we were poor, and that we hadn't clothes!"

"I know—I know!" Richard's eyes were smiling, as if he knew the picture, and liked it.

"Well, Linda married when I was ten, and Josephine came, and then Julia came. I still lived for books and babies. But, unlike Linda, I cared." Harriet's whole face glowed; she looked off into space, and her voice had a longing note. "I cared for clothes and good times!" she said. "I adored the children, but I dreamed of carriages—maids—glory—achievements! I knew that other women did it—"

"I remember feeling that way!" Richard commented, mildly, as she paused.

"Well," Harriet said, "I met Royal—Blondin one night. He lived in our town—Watertown. He had a dreadful, artificial sort of mother. My sister didn't approve of her at all. A friend of his named Street was an artist, and he had a nice little wife, and a baby, and they lived in a big, baroque sort of studio. It seemed wonderful to me. They loved each other, and their baby, but they were so free! They would have the whole crowd to dinner, twenty of us, bread and red wine and macaroni and music and talk! It was wonderful—or I thought so! It was so different from Linda's ideas, of frosted layer-cake, and chopped nuts, and Fire Hundred. I loved the studio, and they—all loved me, and he—Royal—loved me especially. He used to talk about Yogi philosophy and Oriental religions and poetry, and after awhile it was understood among them all that he loved me, and I him. And we were engaged. Of course Linda suspected, and there was opposition at home, but in the studio, helping the Streets get their supper, it seemed so right—so simple! Royal said he did not believe in the orthodox ceremony of marriage. He argued that no one could live up to his promises, and I believed him. Miriam Street, the artist's wife, was a poet, and she wrote the ceremony by which we were married. We had a big supper, and they were all there, and this poem—this marriage poem—was beautiful. It was published in a magazine, afterward, and called 'A Marriage for True Lovers.' It had a part for the woman to say, and a part for the man, and Royal and I said those, and then it had a part for the woman's friend, and the man's friend, and for all their friends. And then there was a promise that when love failed on either side, the two were free, to keep the memory of the perfect love unstained by the ugly years.

"I Remember Feeling That Way!"

Richard Commented, Mildly, as She Paused.

She paused; Richard did not speak. She had told him this much in a simple, childish voice, a voice that was an echo of that old time, he knew. Presently she went on:

"There was music, and then they all kissed me, and we had supper, and they drank our health. I went back that night to my sister's; Royal stayed with his mother. We planned to go away on our honeymoon the next day. I did not tell Linda and Fred that I considered myself married. I knew they would not understand and would try to interfere."

"The next morning I slipped away from the house with my suitcase, and I met Royal Blondin downtown. We majored to Syracuse and took a train there for New York. I had felt sick when I awakened—it was partly excitement, and partly the supper the night before, when we had all eaten and drunk too much. But I was very sick in the train, I thought I was going to die. Royal persuaded me to eat my lunch in the dining car, and that only made me worse. There was a nice woman in the train, with two little girls, and she took care of me. And when she got to New York—I had told her that I was on my wedding journey, and perhaps that made her kind—she took us to her boarding house in West Forty-sixth street. The landlady was a dear, good woman, a Mrs. Harrington, and—I was very sick by this time—she put me into her own room, because the house was full, and sent for her own doctor."

"It was a time of horror," Harriet said, smiling a little, after a moment of thought. "The strange women and the strange room, and Royal coming in with flowers, and sitting beside me. The doctor said it was a touch of poisoning, and I was ill only a few days. But the homesickness, and the strangeness! Somehow, I didn't feel married. I felt like a lost little girl. I wanted to be back in Linda's kitchen again, safe, and scolding because nothing interesting ever happened."

"Well, I was sick for three or four days. It was the fourth day when I was well enough to go out. Royal thanked them, and paid Mrs. Harrington and the doctor and we went to lunch downtown—it was at Murtin's. I remember, and Royal was so excited and interested in everything. But I still felt limp and dull. We shopped and went about seeing things after lunch, and then we went to the hotel where he was staying. We were registered there as Mr. and Mrs. Blondin; it was all quite taken for granted."

Harriet stopped; her face was drawn and white, her words coming with difficulty. The phrases brief and dry. Richard was paying her absolute attention, his eyes fixed upon her face.

"We had dinner upstairs," she said. She paused, her lips tight pressed.

"I can't tell you," she began again, suddenly. "I can't tell you how it was that I came suddenly to know that I was too young for marriage! In Miriam Street's little studio, where they were laughing about the baby and the supper, it seemed different. But here, in a hotel, I suddenly wanted my sister. I wanted to be home again."

"We were talking and planning naturally enough. Royal was coming and going in the two rooms; I had plenty of chance to—escape. Every time I let one go by my heart beat harder."

He could tell from her voice that her heart was beating hard now with the memory of that old time.

"If I had let them all go by," she recommenced, "my life would have been different. In a few weeks we would have come back to Watertown, as man and wife, and perhaps had a studio near the Streets', and perhaps found a solution. But I couldn't!"

"I caught up my coat; left my hat and bag. I went down the stairs, not daring to wait for the elevator. And I went to Mrs. Harrington's. She was very kind and took me in; she said that perhaps it would be better to wait—until I was older. I cried all night, and the next day Mrs. Harrington lent me the money and I went back to Linda."

"Of course, it was terrible, at first. But they were kind to me, in their way. And I was cured. I went into hysterics at the first mention of the whole hideous thing. They saw Roy, and they told me that I need never see him again. The papers—for it got to the papers!—said that a divorce had been arranged, but there was no need for a divorce. It was all hushed up—Linda and Fred never spoke of it. I—ah, well, I couldn't!"

"But when Fred's brother, David, who was in dental college then, began to like me, then they began to make light of it," Harriet remembered. "There had been no marriage, of course, either in law or in fact. They all knew that. And I suppose if I had married David it might have been happier for me. But as it was, I angered them. I didn't want to marry David. And so it was what folly girls got themselves into—what the world thought of a girl who had been 'talked about'—what the least breath of scandal meant!"

"And you went back to Blondin?" Richard suggested.

"No, I never saw him again until a year ago in this garden!" Harriet said.

"You never saw him again?" the man ejaculated.

"Not for nine years!"

"But—my God, my dear girl, he spoke of you as his wife!" Richard said.

"He said I had been. Not that I was now!"

The man looked at her, looked away at the river, and shrugged his shoulders as if he were mystified by the ways of women.

"But—you were never his wife?" he said, thrily.

"Oh, no! You didn't think," Harriet said, hurt. "That I would have married you, or anyone else, if I had been!"

"You let him blackmail you for that?" Richard further marvelled.

"I knew—in my own mind, of course, that I was not to blame," the girl said, anxiously. "But it sounded—horrible." Richard bit his lower lip, looked critically at his racket, slowly shook his head.

"I didn't mind what any one thought," Harriet said, reading his thought. "But they did!"

"They?" Richard repeated, patiently. "Everyone," she supplied, promptly. "Your wife, your mother, Mary Putnam! Even Mrs. Tabor!"

"I suppose so!" he conceded, after a pause. And beneath his breath he added, "Isabel—Linda Tabor!"

His tone was all she asked of exquisite reassurance.

"I hoped you wouldn't!" she said, standing up with clasped hands and a sudden brightening of her tired and colorless face. "That's what I tried to make myself believe you would feel! I wanted so to leave all behind. I thought he had gone, that it was all over, that what it was mattered more than what it seemed like! I thought I could save Nina better, with what I knew, than any one else! But last night," Harriet added, "proved to me that I had been all wrong. I've been so worried," she added, with utter faith in his decision. "I don't know what you think we had better do."

For a full minute Richard watched her in silence. Then he said, mildly: "About Nina, you mean?"

"About everything!" Harriet suddenly laughed gaily, like a child. Life seemed once more straight and pleasant in this exquisite June morning; she felt puzzled, but somehow no longer afraid. The menacing horrors of all the years, the vague uneasiness that she had never quite dared to face, were fluttering about her awakening spirit like Alice's pack of cards.

"Nina will come into line," her father said, thoughtfully; "she doesn't know what she wants. I wish—I wish he loved her!" he added, with a faint frown. "I'll see him about it again. We'll take her to Rio. She'll get over it."

"And—" Harriet stopped, and began again: "And do you want things to go on just as they are?" she asked.

For answer Richard smiled at her in silence.

"No," he said, finally. "I can't say that I do. I want you to worry less, and to buy yourself some new gowns, and to begin to enjoy life! Shakespeare had you down fine when he talked about conscience making cowards of us all. What did you do it for? A young, capable, good-looking girl scared by a lot of old women! Now, we'll take up this Nina question, later on. You'd better go up and get yourself some coffee, and go to bed for awhile. Better plan to be in town for a day or two, for you'll both need clothes for the steamer!"

"You're very kind," the girl said, eyes averted, voice almost inaudible. They were both standing now, Harriet's head turned aside, so that he could not see her face, but her soft fingers resting in his.

"I'm not kind at all!" Richard said, with a rather confused laugh. He patted her hand encouragingly. "The sea trip will shake both you and Nina up, and do you a world of good!" he said.

"You think—" Harriet raised the soft, dark lashes, and her splendid, weary eyes met his. "You really aren't worried about Nina?"

And she tried by a very faint stirring of her fingers to free them and, finding them held, dropped her eyes again.

No Worms in a Healthy Child
All children troubled with Worms have an unhealthy color, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion, and act as a general strengthening Tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or dislodge the worms, and the child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 60c per bottle.

The camphor industry is a very important one in China. Whole families sometimes have shares in a single camphor tree; indeed the ownership of a tree has been known to be shared by 2,000 people.

Indigestion

Many persons, otherwise vigorous and healthy, are bothered occasionally with indigestion. The effects of a disordered stomach on the system are dangerous, and prompt treatment of indigestion is important. The only medicine I have needed has been something to aid digestion and clean the liver," writes Mr. Fred Ashby, a McKinney, Texas, farmer. "My medicine is for indigestion and stomach trouble of any kind. I have never found anything that touches the spot, like Black-Draught. I take it in broken doses after meals. For a long time I tried pills, which griped and didn't give the good results. Black-Draught liver medicine is easy to take, easy to keep, inexpensive."

Thedford's

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT

To the Board of Education, Hickman, Kentucky—

Gentlemen: I have the honor of submitting my annual report of the Hickman public schools.

The statistics compiled and submitted in the various monthly reports handed to your secretary, at the close of each school month, indicate a very good condition of our schools.

Statistical reports must be used in order to get facts before the board and the people generally, but the real work and worth of school management, and the efficiency of the teaching force, can not be truly shown by figures and percentage tables. The real work of the school can only be measured in the value it has been creating higher ideals among the pupils and in training them for the most efficient citizenship. I am glad to say that I believe that the reports show a decided improvement over any previous year.

Annual Statistical Report

Number of teachers in High School—Men, 2; Women, 2; Total, 4.

The public schools are organized and maintained in order to prepare our boys and girls to become better, more patriotic and more efficient citizens. This is the high ideal that each teacher should hold steadily before the school.

I am glad to hear testimony to the almost universal good work done by our teachers during the past year. No person should enter upon the work of teaching without serious consideration. No work is harder and more nerve wearing, and no work demands more conscientious, consecrated devotion to duty. The influence of the teacher either makes or mars lives, and unless the would-be teacher realizes this point fully she would better decide to do something else.

I wish to impress as strongly as possible the importance of good, thoroughly prepared and trained teachers for our schools. The mere fact that one is a graduate of our, or any other school, is not evidence that he or she is prepared to teach school.

The high school education is an essential basis upon which to build in teaching, or in practicing any other profession, but until the people learn that teaching requires at least as much preparation as do all the other callings, they will be doing their children and the state incalculable wrong by employing incompetent persons to teach their children.

Good buildings, good equipment and the best books are of great value in doing school work, but above and beyond all these material things stands the teacher, whose worth and personality decides for all time to come the destiny of the children entrusted to her charge.

Just at this point I want to call your attention to the splendid work done the past year by the Parent-Teachers Association. This association raised enough money the past year to equip a school kitchen and pay the salary of an efficient home economics teacher for the full year. I wish to congratulate the school on having one of the best Parent-Teachers Associations in the state.

There is an educational awakening in every school in Kentucky, and Hickman's schools will be placed by her patriotic citizens in a position in the very forefront of the onward movement for better and more thorough citizenship.

Last year, as you know, our high school was placed on the accredited list of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the South. No school can be accredited which does not require for graduation the completion of a four-year high school course of study. No school can be on this accredited list that does not require at least three-fourths of the high school credits to be graduates of standard colleges belonging to the Southern Association of Colleges.

There are other things of which I would like to speak, but the length of this report precludes my discussing them at this time.

I cannot close this report without expressing to the Board of Education my sincere thanks for the courtesy with which all of my recommendations have been received, and for the loyal support that has been given me in every effort to improve the school.

Respectfully,
J. M. CALVIN,
Superintendent of Schools.

ASPIRIN

Name "Bayer" on Genuine

Beware! Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for twenty-one years and proved safe by millions. Take Aspirin only as told in the Bayer package for Colds, Headaches, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago and for Pain. Handy the boxes of twelve Bayer Tablets of Aspirin cost few cents. Druggists also sell larger packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Mannesmann-Schneider of Elberfeld.

BIG COTTON DEAL

One day last week A. E. Markham sold to Farris Nalfelh 857 bales of cotton. Mr. Nalfelh bought the cotton for the Newberger Cotton Co. of Memphis, one of the biggest cotton buyers in the United States. The deal was made by Mr. Nalfelh and Mr. Markham. Mr. Nalfelh made two trips to Memphis to see about the trade. The amount of the deal made was $80,000. Mr. Nalfelh thinks the cotton will bring this coming season about 20 cents. The Newberger Cotton Co. will be buying cotton thru Mr. Nalfelh this coming year.—Tiptonville Gazette.
